
Nancy Macgregor

Vice President, Global Networks

Nancy Macgregor has been with Susan G. Komen for the Cure® for much of its history. As vice president, global networks, Macgregor collaborates with other Komen leadership members to develop, implement and evaluate strategies to build and sustain the capacity of the Komen Affiliate Network, which includes more than 120 Affiliates in the U.S. and three globally. Macgregor guides development and evaluation of pilot projects, benchmarks, standards of excellence and supporting resources to build and sustain the Affiliates' capacity to fulfill Komen's promise to save lives and end breast cancer forever. She also plays a key role in connecting Komen for the Cure's U.S. Affiliate strategy to its international Affiliate strategy.

Macgregor joined Komen for the Cure in 1990, and has played an instrumental role in the exponential growth of the organization. When she first came to Komen, she was a member of the development team. From there, she became the director of chapter development (the chapters are now known as Komen Affiliates), where she oversaw the establishment and growth of Komen's Affiliate Network, and then she became director of planning and development, where she was responsible for planning and evaluation of the organization's strategic plan. In 2000, Macgregor moved to director of international and was responsible for establishing a strategic and operational framework for the organization's involvement in international markets. In 2004, she became the director of the Affiliate Network and then became the director of Affiliate Strategy and Planning in 2007. Macgregor most recently served as the managing director of Affiliate Strategy and Planning.

Prior to joining Komen, Macgregor spent 13 years in various positions in the sales and service division of the General Electric Company Medical Systems Division (now known as GE Healthcare).

Macgregor received her Bachelor of Arts in business management from Alverno College in Milwaukee, Wis.
