Did you know?

At this time, there are no special screening guidelines for women with dense breasts. Talk with your doctor about what screening tests are right for you.

BREAST DENSITY is a measure used to compare the amount of fat to the amount of breast tissue on a mammogram. Dense breasts can look white or light gray on a mammogram. Cancer can also look white or light gray on a mammogram. This makes mammograms of dense breasts hard to read.
